Rudolf Bultmann (1884–1976) was instrumental in shaping the 20th century exegetical, theological and church discourses with his hermeneutics. As one of form criticism's founders and a representative of dialectical theology, he took a critical stance towards liberal theological views in the 1920s and made the hermeneutic question on the conditions for comprehending biblical texts the focus of his scholarly work.

This set contains the Guide to Bultmann and Rudolf Bultmann – A Biography. As well as providing an excellent first introduction to understanding Bultmann, both volumes are also a reference work for experts and authorities on Bultmann.
