Die elektronische Willenserklärung

Kommunikationstheoretische und rechtsdogmatische Grundlagen des elektronischen Geschäftsverkehrs

[The Electronic Declaration of Intent. By Andreas Wiebe.]

Published in German.

The development and increasing spread of information and communication technologies has led to more and more »automated« forms of communication which can also be used for the formation of contracts. Andreas Wiebe examines the extent to which electronic business transactions can be adequately integrated into the present contract theory. In order to transcend the present state of technology and to make this study relevant for the future development of contract law, the author has included concepts from the theory of communication and has established a connection to the legal doctrine of the declaration of intent .
