Religionsunterricht für alle?

Zum Beitrag des Religionsverfassungsrechts für die pluralistische Gesellschaft

[Religious Education for All? On the Contribution of a Constitutional Law for Religion for a Plural Society.]

Published in German.

Religious constitutional law in Germany is based on amiability towards religions and the neutrality of the state. However, this historically grown, optimistic order now stands before its biggest test so far. Taking religious education as an example, Hinnerk Wißmann peels back the layers of current law to find that further development must take into account the justification and limits of cooperation between the state and religious communities.

Hinnerk Wißmann Geboren 1971; Studium der Rechtswissenschaften in Göttingen, Hannover und Freiburg; 2001 Promotion, 2007 Habilitation; Inhaber des Lehrstuhls für Öffentliches Recht, Verwaltungswissenschaften, Kultur- und Religionsverfassungsrecht an der Universität Münster; Geschäftsführender Direktor des Kommunalwissenschaftlichen Instituts (KWI).
