Scribal Laws

Exegetical Variation in the Textual Transmission of Biblical Law in the Late Second Temple Period

[Schrift-Gesetze. Exegetische Veränderungen in der textlichen Überlieferung der biblischen Gesetze im späten Zeitalter des Zweiten Tempels.]

Published in English.

On the basis of a detailed analysis of extant texts and versions, David Andrew Teeter examines the nature and background of deliberate scribal changes in the text of biblical law during the late Second Temple period. What were the »laws« governing this mode of scribal production and how are the »laws« produced thereby to be understood? What are the underlying causes of textual difference, and what are the effects of the resulting plurality upon the character of interpretive scriptural encounter? What do the attested textual differences reveal about the social history of the biblical text, and how does this relate to halakhic diversity within Judaism of the period? The author undertakes to answer these questions in a methodologically rigorous way, offering a sustained examination of the nature of exegetical textual variants and their place within the multi-faceted interpretive encounter with scripture in the late Second Temple period.
