[Skeptischer Glaube. Claremont Studien zur Religionsphilosophie, Konferenz 2010.]

Published in English.
The authors of this volume rethink our usual understanding of the relationship between faith, belief and skepticism. For some, «skeptical faith» is an oxymoron and faith and skepticism are mutually exclusive states or attitudes. Others argue that there is no proper faith without skepticism about faith. Taking John Schellenberg’s recent work on the possibility of a «skeptical faith» as a starting point, the authors respond to and in some cases seek to go further than Schellenberg. In a variety of ways, the papers take up the following questions: How are we to construe the relationship between faith, belief, and skepticism if we seek to understand what is characteristic of a life of faith, or of unfaith? Is belief in God necessary for faith in God to be possible? Does one need to have sufficient reasons for believing something before one is rationally entitled to having faith in something? In short, what is the relationship between faith and belief, belief and understanding, understanding and experience, and experience and skepticism?
