

Studies in the History and Archaeology of Ancient Israel and Judah

Edited by Ido Koch and Omer Sergi

[Studien zur Geschichte und Archäologie des Antiken Israel und Judäas.]

Published in English.

The archaeological and historical study of the southern Levant during the first millennium BCE – the Iron Age kingdoms and their societies as well as their successors during the Persian and Hellenistic periods – has dramatically developed in recent decades. This is the result of two common and overlapping trends: the vast archaeological exploration of the southern Levant and the shift in the studies of biblical literature. The ten contributions in this volume demonstrate the range of questions, methods, and theoretical frameworks employed in the current study of Judah and neighbouring regions during the first millennium BCE and beyond.
