

Transsexualität, Staatsangehörigkeit und internationales Privatrecht

Entwicklungen in Europa, Amerika und Australien

Hrsg. v. Jürgen Basedow u. Jens M. Scherpe

[Transsexuality, Nationality and Private International Law. Developments in Europe, America and Australia.]

Published in German.

The Max Planck Institute for Foreign Private and Private International Law has conducted an analysis of the legal status of transsexuals in Europe America and Australia. The book is based on an expert opinion for the German constitutional court, in view of the constitutional challenge of the German law on transsexuals. It was submitted, that the requirement of German nationality for legal recognition of a gender change in Germany violated the German constitution. The expert opinion states that this requirement not only violates the German constitution, but also the European Convention on Human Rights. The authors suggest alternatives to the current legal rule.
