

Jan van de Kamp

Übersetzungen von Erbauungsliteratur und die Rolle von Netzwerken am Ende des 17. Jahrhunderts

[The Translation of Devotional Literature and the Role of Networks at the End of the Seventeenth Century.]

Published in German.

Translations were central connections between the different piety movements during the seventeenth century. Jan van de Kamp's case study analyzes networks of German translators of English and Dutch devotional literature to trace the important role of networks in the production, distribution, and reception of these translations. The author also addresses the influence of other piety movements on German Pietism as well as the links between them.

Jan van de Kamp Geboren 1984; Studium der Germanistik und Bible Translation; 2011 Promotion; 2019 Habilitation; seit 2013 Dozent für Kirchengeschichte am Hersteld Hervormd Seminarie an der Fakultät für (Religion und) Theologie der Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam.
