

Thomas Finkenauer

Vererblichkeit und Drittwirkungen der Stipulation im klassischen römischen Recht

[Transferability by Succession and Third-Party Effects of the Stipulation in Classical Roman Law.]

Published in German.

It is understood that a stipulation stands as a paradigm for an obligation. Certain contractual clauses, however, have assured the succession not only of the heirs, but even of successors to a single right of the creditor or the debtor. For the first time, Thomas Finkenauer demonstrates this break with the allegedly axiomatic dogma of the Roman law.

Thomas Finkenauer ist Universitätsprofessor für Bürgerliches Recht, Römisches Recht und Europäisches Privatrecht in Tübingen.
